Drink up! Our water is safe, officials insist

In defence. After media reports of potential issues with Regina's water, authorities have publicly defended the city's tap water

JEFF MACKEY
jeff.mackey@metronews.ca

Half of Regina's water mains are made with asbestos cement. The city does not, however, check asbestos levels in its drinking water.

"We regularly check the quality of our drinking water to ensure that it is safe," said Sandy Bailey, manager of Water and Sewer Engineering.

"We don't test for asbestos in the water, it is not a regulated substance in Canada, and the World Health Organization, as well as the Saskatchewan Ministry of the Environment and Health Canada, have said that it is not a health concern when ingested.

"Our drinking water is safe and there is nothing to be alarmed about," she added.

Canadian guidelines currently dictate that although asbestos is a proven and deadly carcinogen when inhaled, it does not have the same effect when ingested.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulates levels of asbestos in its water supply. This came after a study by the EPA found that there might be repercussions to ingesting asbestos.

"There has been some talk about a study coming out of the United States that has looked at a linkage between asbestos in drinking water and some benign forms of cancer of the stomach," said Sam Ferris, executive director of the municipal branch at the Saskatchewan Ministry of Environment. "We don't know how rigorous that study is and we really need the time to look at that and any other emerging information.

Next steps

- Action. The city plans to reline all of the deteriorating asbestos-laden pipes.
- Pipe replacement. Some of the pipes, the ones that have been in operation for nearly 70 years, will be completely replaced once they pose a significant enough risk of bursting.

"If the city wanted to go ahead and test for asbestos in its drinking water, it could certainly do that on its own," Ferris said.

"Also, I might add that, just because Regina has asbestos-based pipes does not necessarily mean that there is asbestos in the water supply," he went on to say. "There is usually a film that develops around the pipes that protect them to some degree."

Kids put on theatre show at Open Air Plaza

More than 150 Grade 4 to 6 students crowded into the Open Air Plaza in the rain on Thursday afternoon to present a brief theatre piece. The presentation was the result of a month-long workshop-based outreach program focusing on children who otherwise might have restricted access to the developmental supports that education in the arts provides. No cracks in this Wall

Popular. Our premier still the most well-liked leader in the country

CARRIE-MAY SIGGINS
carriemay.siggins@metronews.ca

Once again, Brad Wall is the most popular premier in the country.

An Angus Reid poll released Thursday shows that 67 per cent of the province approves of the way the Saskatchewan premier is handling his duties. It's one in a long line of polls over the last four years that have put Wall on or near the top.

Bill Boyd, Minister of the Economy, says the results come as no surprise. "People across this province believe that premier Wall is doing a very good job in handling the issues here in Saskatchewan and representing Saskatchewan on the national stage."

Professor Joe Garcia is with Johnson Shoyama Graduate School of Public Policy. He says that historically many premiers and prime ministers have enjoyed the kinds of high numbers that Wall has now.

"But what's truly remarkable," says Garcia, "is the consistency of the rating for him. Mr. Wall has enjoyed this kind of rating almost since he started."

Garcia lists three reasons why Wall remains popular.

The first is the positive performance of the economy. Voters tend to like their leaders when the economy is doing well.

The second, says Garcia, is Wall's ability to separate himself from some of the more unpopular policy decisions that his government has made. "Anything people see wrong with the government is the fault of ministers but not Mr. Wall."

Lastly, Wall has helped to successfully transform the branding of the Saskatchewan Party, and that's translated into his own positive image. The party is now seen as more moderate and city-oriented than in years past.

"They have reinvented themselves," says Garcia. "That's the major contribution that the premier has made in leading the Saskatchewan Party and establishing himself so strongly. He was able to reinvent it, and reinvent it in a way that didn't create divisions. And that wasn't easy to do. That has been his major accomplishment. To some extent the popularity has as much to do with that then in the way that he's actually governing."

So, will Premier Wall, like Prime Minister Stephen Harper, use his popularity as a mandate to drive through controversial policies?

For Wall, says Garcia, "It's not a transformational project that he's after. He's not saying we've got to become more conservative."

How others fared

- Alberta premier Alison Redford came in second, with a 60 per cent approval rating, the only other premier to clock in at over 50 per cent.
- Manitoba's Greg Selinger and Newfoundland and Labrador's Kathy Dunderdale tied for third place with 46 per cent, with Dunderdale dropping 14 points from last December.
- The lowest ranked premier is Nova Scotia's Darrell Dexter, with 27 per cent.

Brad Wall has the highest approval rating in the country, again, according to an Angus Reid poll. JENNIFER GRAHAM/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Lysyk. Provincial auditor slams grad rates, pipelines

Saskatchewan's auditor is sounding the alarm bell over a drop in Grade 12 graduation rates, and says the province needs to do more to follow laws on pipeline construction and operations.

Bonnie Lysyk says that the overall graduation rate dropped from 75.6 per cent to 72.3 per cent between 2005 and 2009 — the latest data available.

That's a drop of 3.3 per cent.

The rate for aboriginal students was even lower at 32.7 per cent.

Lysyk says the Ministry of Education hasn't sufficiently identified or analyzed the reason for the drop.

She says the ministry also hasn't given clear direction to the educators on how to improve graduation rates and that needs to change.

Lysyk also raised concerns about the Ministry of Energy and Resources, saying it doesn't have effective ways to ensure compliance with The Pipelines Act and regulations.

Lysyk says requirements are not being acted upon and that failure could harm people or the environment.

She says one problem is the ministry doesn't collect enough information to know if pipelines are properly maintained or if operators can adequately respond to emergencies.

Pipelines

Energy and Resources regulates 1,700 licensed pipelines that span 23,500 kilometres. There haven't been any significant spills in recent years, but the auditor says pipelines are aging and one quarter of them are more than 40 years old.

Takes a big heart to be a Riot in Regina

New documentary. Who Do You Hit For: The Story of the Regina Riot, will be premiered after a Riot pep rally on Saturday

jeff.mackey@metronews.ca

The Regina Riot play their first home game of their second season in the WWCFL at 11 a.m. Sunday at Mosaic Stadium.

Anyone feeling left out of the loop because they missed last season can get an up close and personal review of the team at the Royal Saskatchewan Museum on Saturday at 7 p.m.

Thomas Retzlaff's documentary Who Do You Hit For: The Story of the Regina Riot, will be premiered at the museum following a Riot pep rally across from Mosaic at 12 p.m. on Saturday.

While making the film he gained amazing access to the Riot throughout their training, regular season and playoff berth in 2011. Retzlaff says people need to see for themselves just how intense the league is.

"This is not lingerie football, this is real football, and the same football you would see at high school, university and professional," Retzlaff said.

"It gets very rough. I have talked to a few of the players — they break ankles and bones, they get bruised up just like everybody else."

Of particular interest is the Riot's rivalry with the Saskatoon Valkyries.

"Really early on the Saskatoon and Regina rivalry kicked in," said Retzlaff. The two teams played their first-ever games against each other.

"It all came down to Regina and Saskatoon competing again in the prairie championship, the winner going on to play in the league championship," said Retzlaff.

But the documentary is really all about the players and their commitment to football.

"They are passionate, funny, dedicated," said Retzlaff. "The majority of the Regina Riot are comprised of working 8-5 women. They work during the day and practice at night."

Jasmine Gemmell won Miss Teen South Central Saskatchewan–World in March, and is now using her platform to spread the word about female-to-female bullying. CONTRIBUTED

Female-to-female bullying a cause for pageant winner

Role model. Grade 9 student draws from personal experience in her goal to raise awareness about the need for kindness

carriemay.siggins@metronews.ca

A Saskatchewan teen is using her recent pageant win to spread the word about female-to-female bullying.

Jasmine Gemmell was crowned Miss Teen South Central Saskatchewan–World in Saskatoon on March 25, and will be heading to Toronto for the Miss Teen Canada–World pageant in July.

Gemmell, 15, had to compete in poise, an interview, a bathing-suit competition and a formal-gown competition, where walking was judged, before she was awarded her crown.

"I'm representing someone who feels that I'm worthy of their slogan," says Gemmell, "and that I can represent that image that they're trying to get across. I feel so honoured to be able to do that for them..."

She plans on using her title to bring more awareness to a cause that has been close to her heart for a number of years.

Gemmell first read about female-to-female bullying when she was in Grade 8. "I was going through a rough time with bullying and that sort of thing myself," she said in an interview.

She did a presentation on the subject and chose to use it as her platform.

Girls have the capacity to be insensitive to how their words and actions are affecting other girls, says Gemmell. Raising awareness about the consequences of our actions can help. "It's the simple fact that we all need to be kind to each other and accept each other for whatever we do."

A scholar, too

Jasmine Gemmell attends Luther College High School in Regina, driving the 40 minutes every morning from Bethune, where her family lives, with her mother who works at the school.

- The Grade 9 student wants to attend Cambridge University to study astrophysics. "I love space," she says. "I'm really interested in what's beyond our tiny Earth."

Italy. Suspected gas leak causes explosion, kills 3

Search teams picking through the rubble of a residential building — which collapsed in southern Italy Thursday after an explosion — have found the bodies of an Italian-Dutch couple and their young child, police say.

Francesco Spinelli, the Carabinieri paramilitary commander in the town of Conversano in the Apulia region, said the bodies were found several hours after the blast. Local officials have told media that a gas leak is suspected as the cause. At least 10 people in surrounding buildings were slightly injured, including one child.

Conversano Mayor Giuseppe Lovascio told Sky 24 Italian television earlier that an Italian-Dutch family had arrived from the Netherlands two days ago on vacation and were staying in the building. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UN, activists allege new wave of atrocities in Syria

Mazraat al-Qubair. Groups say nearly 80 people killed, just weeks after mass killings in Houla

UN Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said unarmed UN monitors came under fire Thursday as they tried to reach the scene of the latest Syrian mass killing. Activists said government forces killed nearly 80 people, including women and children who were shot, hacked to death and burned in their homes.

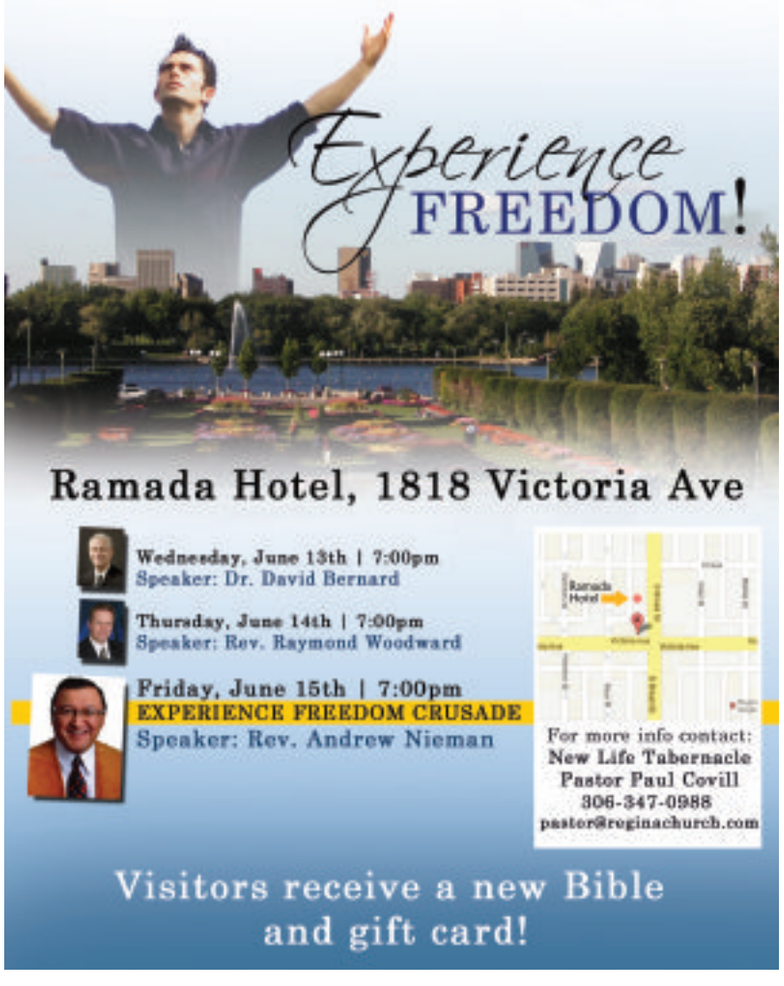
Ban told the UN General Assembly that the monitors "were shot at with small arms" as they tried to reach Mazraat al-Qubair, a farming area in the central Hama province. The group initially was denied access. He did not mention any casualties, and it was not clear who was behind the shooting.

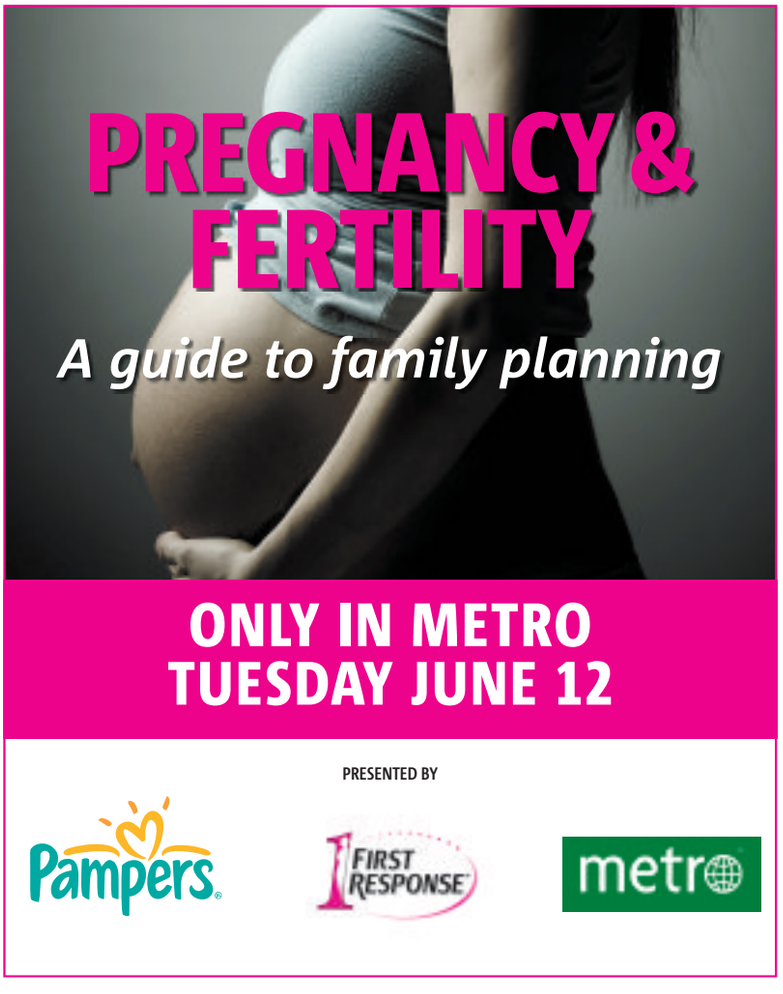
International envoy Kofi Annan told the General Assembly, "If things do not change, the future is likely to be one of brutal repression, massacres, sectarian violence, and even all-out civil war."

Syria described reports that its forces committed a massacre as "absolutely baseless" and blamed the violence on terrorists who are trying to provoke foreign military intervention to topple Assad.

A resident of Mazraat al-Qubair said troops shelled the area for five hours Wednesday before government-aligned militiamen entered the area, "killing and hacking everyone they could find."

"Women and children were burned inside their homes in al-Qubair," said Mousab Alhamadee, an activist based in Hama. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS





First Nations school being tested for HIV

Infection unlikely.
University of Manitoba professor administers faulty diabetes screening

Dozens of students and staff at a First Nations high school are being tested for HIV and hepatitis after undergoing a faulty diabetes screening.

A University of Manitoba professor talked to students at Southeast Collegiate on May 4 about diabetes and used a glucometer to test blood-sugar levels on about 80 people.

University spokesman John Danakas said the professor changed the needle used on each person.

"It's the device which holds the lancet that was reused, and you're not supposed to reuse that. Although the device never comes into contact with the person's skin ... there's still a very, very small, I think it's one in several million, possibility that there could be an infection."

The university later clarified the chances are deemed to be less than one in a million.

Danakas would not identify the professor, but said he was not authorized to perform the diabetes test and has been disciplined.

The case has angered some aboriginal leaders.

"While the risk of a student contracting an infection is described by the University of Manitoba as exceptionally unlikely ... the risk is not zero," Chief Michael Yellowback of the Manto Sipi Cree Nation, said in a written statement. Eight children from the reserve who attend the Winnipeg school were part of the diabetes test.

The group that represents First Nations communities across northern Manitoba said it was alarmed that impromptu diabetes tests were done without parental consent.

"At the heart of the matter, prior written parental consent should have been required by the school," said Grand Chief David Harper of the Manitoba Keewatinowi Okimakanak.

Montreal police arrest protesters

Montreal police made a series of searches and arrests in connection with disruptive protests, and those detained Thursday included the daughter of an elected politician.

Amir Khadir, the sole elected member of the left-wing party Quebec Solidaire, confirmed that his 19-year-old daughter was among those arrested.

Five out of 11 people being sought Thursday were arrested.

It was unclear what charges Khadir's daughter, Yalda Machouf-Khadir, might face. Her arrest came just two days after that of her politician father, who was released with a fine.

Khadir had compared his own act of blocking a street during a protest, to the civil disobedience of Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King.

Civilian deaths can't be tolerated, Karzai says

Afghanistan. 18 reported dead in NATO airstrike; villagers displayed bodies, which included women and children

Afghanistan's president said Thursday that 18 people killed in a NATO airstrike in eastern Afghanistan were all civilians.

NATO has so far said it has no records of civilian deaths from the pre-dawn strike Wednesday on a house in Logar province.

The NATO and Afghan troops were going after a local Taliban leader when the international coalition says they came under fire and called in an airstrike on the house.

"This is unacceptable. It cannot be tolerated," Afghan President Hamid Karzai said.

He criticized NATO for not being able to provide an explanation for the vans piled with women and children's bodies that villagers displayed to reporters. NATO confirmed only deaths of militants from the strike.

Strained relations

NATO confirmed only deaths of militants from the strike, but has sent in a team to investigate allegations that civilians were killed either alongside or instead of insurgents.

- Karzai said that he was cutting short his trip to China because of the events. Also on Wednesday, a trio of suicide bombers killed 22 people in the marketplace of Kandahar.
- Raids on militants taking cover in villages have been a repeated source of strained relations between the Afghan government and its international allies.

Ports do not divert cargo, U.S. told Trade irritant.

U.S. senators had complained Canada was unfairly subsidizing diversion of ships

A commissioner on a U.S. federal agency probing whether Canadian ports on the West Coast are luring lucrative cargo business away from their American counterparts says the problem may be minimal.

The Canadian government and other officials have told the Federal Maritime Commission that over a period of 10 years, only 2.5 per cent of U.S.-bound cargo was imported via Canadian ports, the agency's Rebecca Dye said Thursday.

Speaking at a Canadian American Business Council conference on China, Dye didn't say when the commission would complete its investigation and deliver its findings to U.S. Congress.

But the matter has been a simmering trade irritant between the U.S. and Canada ever since a pair of senators from Washington state complained that Canadians are unfairly subsidizing the diversion of cargo ships away from their American competitors, particularly in Prince Rupert, B.C.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian response

Andrew Mayer, an official at the Prince Rupert Port Authority, pointed out that Canadian officials hardly give cargo ships a free ride.

- While the U.S. taxes shippers, Canada charges them a user fee, he said: "We charge them to help fund the maintenance of these ports, but we don't have a tax."

Aircraft. Aveos' airframe unit attracts no potential buyers

Hope appears to be fading for most former Aveos employees after no potential buyers expressed interest in the aircraft maintenance firm's airframe unit, says a report by the monitor overseeing the company's restructuring.

The business employed about 1,500 of the 2,600 people who worked at Aveos before it closed its operations in March and obtained court protection from creditors under the Companies' Creditors Arrangement Act.

Work on repairing and overhauling airframes has increasingly gone to low-cost operations in Asia, Latin America and elsewhere.

Aveos has said that its airframe business was not viable, suggesting the most buyer interest will be focused on the components and engine repair divisions.

Air Canada has reached an agreement with Aveos Fleet Performance Inc. that could facilitate the sale of those two divisions, according to a June 5 report from FTI Consulting Canada Inc, the court-appointed monitor assisting with the Aveos restructuring.

The airline had earlier filed a motion last month to terminate contracts with its former subsidiary, but later withdrew the effort and agreed to continue negotiations.

"The Air Canada agreement results in a higher probability that both the engines and components business will be sold to a party that can restart operations as it will have the support of Air Canada, Aveos' largest customer," wrote Greg Watson and Toni Vanderlaan of FTI Consulting.

However, they cautioned there are still many risks with the sale.

Union representative Jean Poirier said Air Canada's move is good, but it doesn't guarantee that engine and component work will return.

"If Air Canada has backed down to guarantee contracts for engines and components, it's good news, but you really have to see which contracts they will send (through)," he said in an interview.

First quarter. Inventory a concern for Lululemon

Lululemon Athletica Inc., which struggled to keep enough products on its shelves last year, said Thursday it now has notably more yoga wear than it can sell.

The Vancouver-based company, best known for its yoga-inspired athletic fashions, said the value of its inventory increased by 67 per cent over the same time last year, while also disclosing a disappointing outlook for the rest of 2012.

The combination appeared to alarm investors, which sent shares of the company down 8.8 per cent after the report, falling $6.31 to close at $65.75 on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Lululemon is projecting that net revenue will come in the range of $273 million to $278 million for the quarter which runs to the end of July, below the $289.8 million projected by analysts, according to Thomson Reuters.

For the year, the company's outlook also fell short of what analysts were expecting.

Lululemon predicted just over $1.3 billion US of revenue and earnings of between $1.55 and $1.60 per share — at least three cents per share below expectations.

Chief executive Christine Day said the company's fundamentals remain strong.

Economy. Federal Reserve chief offers positive outlook

U.S. Federal Reserve chief Ben Bernanke sketched a hopeful outlook in testimony to a congressional panel Thursday and sent no signals that the Fed will take further steps soon to aid the economy.

Bernanke acknowledged that Europe's debt crisis poses risks to the U.S. financial markets. He also noted that U.S. unemployment remains high at 8.2 per cent. And he said the Fed is prepared to take steps to boost the U.S. economy if it weakens.

But he said Fed officials still need to study the most recent economic trends, including job growth. For now, Bernanke said he foresees moderate growth this year.

He said he's mindful that all that could change, if Europe's crisis quickly worsened or U.S. job growth stalled.

"As always, the Federal Reserve remains prepared to take action as needed to protect the U.S. financial system and economy in the event that financial stresses escalate," he told the Joint Economic Committee.

Most economists don't expect a major announcement at the Fed's next policy meeting June 19-20, despite signals from other Fed members in favour of considering further action.

Five Wives. Idaho rescinds ban on 'offensive' vodka

Idaho reversed direction in the face of a lawsuit Wednesday and said it will sell Five Wives Vodka, but the liquor producer whose label makes an unmistakable reference to polygamy would not immediately rule out legal action.

The Idaho State Liquor Division rejected as offensive last week the product that shows five women hiking up their skirts on the vodka bottle.

Idaho is more than 25 per cent Mormon and the church at one time allowed polygamy but abandoned the practice in 1890.

The vodka originates from Ogden's Own Distillery in Utah, where the Mormon church is based. The company said it would sue Idaho on principle if necessary.

The state's decision allows the company to sell the vodka only by special order.

Steve Conlin, a partner and marketing chief for Ogden's Own Distillery, said Wednesday the company's attorneys would review Idaho's decision before making a statement, likely on Thursday.

1 Bonnaroo. 80,000 people are camping out on a 700-acre site in Manchester, Tenn., this weekend for the epic music festival Bonnaroo, which features 150 acts on 13 stages. The likes of Radiohead, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Phish and the Beach Boys will all be there. Best overnight guitar campfire sing-song ever.

2 Home ATM. NBA player DeShawn Stevenson installed an ATM machine in his Dallas home to allow his buddies to withdraw money before they go out partying. And each ATM withdrawal at his house will cost you: $4.50 ATM fee per transaction. I'm taking that idea to the bank.

3 Rob Lowe Takes Winnipeg. There have been spottings of him in town all week, where he's filming The Casey Anthony Story for Lifetime TV — playing the part of prosecutor Jeff Ashton. One woman tweeted the Lowe down, "Guess who just met Rob Lowe? Yeah, that's right. Moi. 80s dream realized. And yes, we touched. Le sigh. #Winnipeg".

4 B.C. Limo Driver. A limo driver in Vernon, B.C.. called police Saturday night because of drunken passengers in his vehicle. Just one problem: When the police showed up, the driver himself had been drinking. And he failed a roadside breath test. He's now facing an impaired driving charge.

5 Graceland. Commemorative CD/DVD editions of Paul Simon's landmark Graceland album came out this week, marking the album's 25th anniversary. They include the new Graceland documentary Under African Skies, chronicling its recording and impact on world music and pop culture. Must watch.

6 Canadian Psycho. Suspected fugitive/cannibal Luka Rocco Magnotta was arrested at an Internet café in Berlin this week. Which actually really shouldn't surprise anyone, as the ultimate narcissist was there checking out reports on the manhunt for himself.

7 Russell Brand. At the MTV Movie Awards, Brand wasted no time in his opening monologue addressing his divorce from Katy Perry. "The last time I did an MTV awards show, I did end up marrying someone that was there. So tonight I'm going to keep my eyes peeled for my next wife!" No word if he kissed a girl that night.

8 Celine Dion. Celine Dion's heart goes out to Kate Winslet, who has said the Titanic theme song, My Heart Will Go On, makes her sick. Dion said on the Today show this week: "If I just count how many times I've sung it, maybe it'll get me sick. If she feels tired just hearing it, and, like, throwing up, I'm glad she was not the one singing it." You should hear me belt it out.

9 Twitter's New Birdie. The world's famous little blue bird doesn't need any accessories anymore, as Twitter announced this week "there's no longer a need for text, bubbled typefaces, or a lowercase 't' to represent Twitter" anymore. So now it's just the birdie. In other news, the blue jay in my backyard still has a bird bath.

10 Miley Cyrus. It was just yesterday that my girls were watching her as Hannah Montana, and now the 19-year-old has gone and gotten engaged. Yes, she announced her engagement to boyfriend actor Liam Hemsworth. No word if dad Billy Ray will sing Achy, Breaky Heart at her wedding.

11 Melissa Stetten. The model hilariously live tweeted an unknown actor Brian Pressly — a devout Christian married with a child — hitting on her in a plane. Sample tweet: "Brian has a wedding ring. I ask him how his wife is, he says he just wears the ring because he likes it. Right, Brian." Horrible acting job Brian.

12 Brock University. Graduating students there were treated to some Hollywood celebrity when Ryan Gosling showed up with girlfriend Eva Mendes on campus to watch his mom graduate on Wednesday. Notebook ending to their schooling.

The group has 40 per cent female membership, and has cut across ethnic boundaries. Staff say the key to avoiding controversy has been close links with the community and regular dialogue with the families of skaters. The skate park is discreetly positioned out of public view.

Prometheus is all about the aesthetics. HANDOUT

Script taints aesthetic gem

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Prometheus.
Ridley Scott's latest imagining is pretty, but the '70s sci-fi dialogue makes it go clunk

Richard: Chris, thematically Prometheus is equally about creation and destruction. As a piece of entertainment goes, however, I'm not sure it will create lasting memories. It won't destroy the goodwill of the first couple of Alien films, but I don't think it will add much to the legacy either. For me there is very little big bang in a movie that is reportedly about the most significant discovery in the history of mankind. You?

Chris: I was blindsided. My expectations were low to none. I didn't want Alien redux, I wanted something different and I got it. The visuals were so grandiose, the aesthetics so nightmarish and baroque that I was dazzled. Only when the pithy dialogue steered the ship did I reject it ... but then something would ooze, a storm would rage and I was back in. And hey, it's not 1979 anymore. We've seen it all and I'm pleased that Scott chose to dwell on dread rather than simple chest-bursting shock. But man ... that dialogue!

RC: It may not be 1979 anymore, but I agree, the dialogue sounded like leftover, bad late '70s sci-fi films. I expected a higher level of writing from a movie that is more about ideas than action. Having said that, I loved Michael Fassbender's automaton space butler. He's got many of the film's best lines and if they ever need someone to play the lead in The Peter O'Toole Story, he's the guy.

CA: Fassbender is fantastic, Rapace is scrappy ... but for me, this was all about aesthetics. Then again, with Scott, it was always about aesthetics. Alien had no story, it found its power in dread, atmosphere and design. Blade Runner had no story, only a philosophy and a MacGuffin and again, exists as a testament to mood, music and architecture. With Prometheus, there are things in here that I haven't seen or experienced since, well, since Blade Runner; things I will never forget. And while there may be no chest-burster freak-outs, one word: Caesarean!

RC: (Mild spoiler) Four words! Do it yourself caesarean! The movie's slow build nicely leads up to that memorable scene, adding an element of horror to the heady mix of ideas but I expected more from Scott. Perhaps Alien set the bar too high for the director to leap over.

CA: I prefer to see it as Alien vs. Predator draining the IQ of the franchise so that Prometheus appears like Potemkin by comparison. But in all seriousness, Prometheus gave me a massive sensory jolt. Great Scott, give me more!

Synopsis

The basic storyline of Alien is in place in Prometheus, just don't call this movie a sequel or a prequel lest you annoy Sir Ridley. A group of hapless space travellers faceoff with some intergalactic nasties who give hugging a bad name. But these face huggers aren't the movie's main draw. Led by Elizabeth Shaw (Noomi Rapace) and Charlie Holloway (Logan Marshall-Green), the expedition into the far corners of the universe aims to prove a connection between ancient human civilizations and extraterrestrials. Chris Alexander sits in for Mark Breslin.

Akerman takes a look at the other side

Rock of Ages. Actress plays a Rolling Stone reporter in her latest role and realizes it can be a pretty tough gig interviewing the rich, famous and difficult

NED EHRBAR
Metro World News in Hollywood

Malin Akerman. HANDOUT

Malin Akerman got a look at how the other half lives in Rock of Ages, playing a Rolling Stone reporter tasked with interviewing the infamously difficult rock star Stacee Jaxx (Tom Cruise). Of course, their interview devolves into a raucous, half-naked rendition of I Want to Know What Love Is, with Cruise using Akerman's rear end as a microphone at one point. Our interview was, to put it mildly, much more staid.

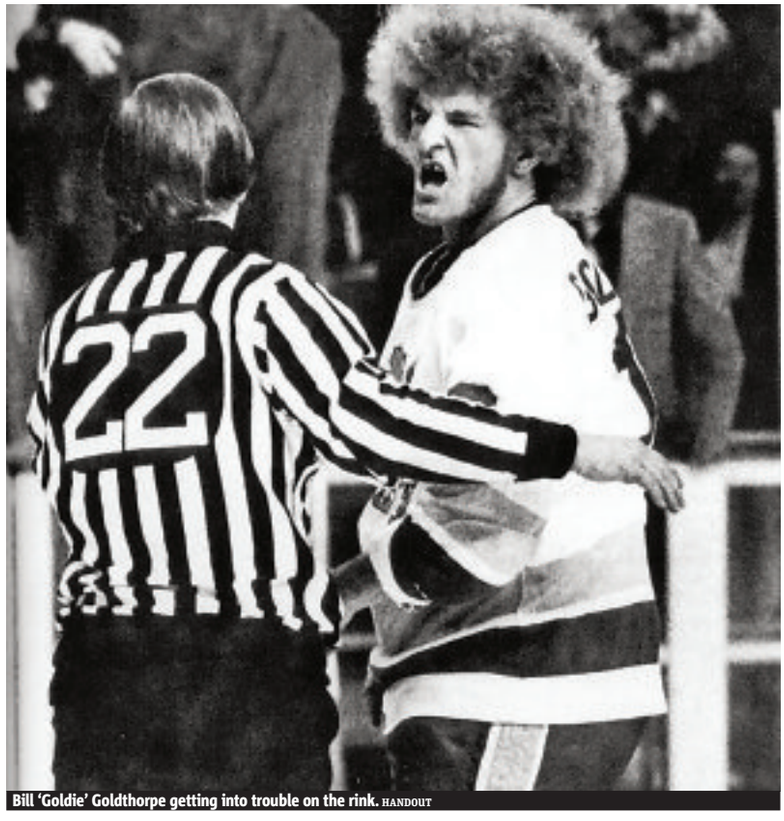
Has playing this part given you new sympathy for the folks interviewing you?
Absolutely. I mean, I've always had sympathy for you guys because I know it's hard. There's that whole mix of wanting to get a really good story, and then on our side of the coin not wanting to give too much of a personal life story. It's hard. It's not easy, finding the right balance. But it was fun to play, definitely. It was nice to be on the other side of the coin. I liked it, but a few people I talked to today, they go, "God, I've had an experience like that." There was one woman who went to someone's house and ended up having to interview a rock star in bed. He was still in bed hungover and wouldn't get out of bed.

Have you been tempted to try go weird and difficult for any of your interviews?
Not brave enough. Not yet (laughs). Maybe one day. I always want to respect whoever I'm with, but I could imagine doing that if someone's not respecting you. But I haven't done it yet.

I hope that I'm not the first.
I highly doubt that will happen. You don't seem like the type.

Have you had much experience singing before doing this project, and was that something that gave you pause?
It definitely did not give me pause. I wanted to do it so badly. I've always wanted to do a musical. I've done a couple of auditions for musicals so it's always kind of been on my radar, but I had a band in 2002 — a self-taught, self-made kind of thing. We recorded our songs in a closet. It was nothing fancy, and I never went anywhere with it, but I'd never had any real vocal training so this was the first time. There was so much pressure to not disappoint. And then also to go into a real studio with real musical directors and producers and editors was really intimidating, but super-exciting at the same time. I was a ball of nerves going into it.

Ogilthorpe. Short Canadian film a tribute to hockey's favourite goon



Bill 'Goldie' Goldthorpe getting into trouble on the rink. HANDOUT

One of the most iconic characters from the cult 1970s film Slapshot will be coming to life in a new Canadian film entitled Ogilthorpe.

Ogie Ogilthorpe, the villainous goon who cameos in the conclusion of Slapshot, was a character based on real-life goon Bill "Goldie" Goldthorpe.

Like in Slapshot, the real Ogilthorpe's legend precedes him. When Goldthorpe played, his fists did the talking, and his bleach blond afro had the potential to make clowns blush. He once threatened Don Cherry and got away with it. And while incarcerated in Syracuse during the American Hockey League season, coaching staff from his team would escort Goldthorpe back and forth from prison between games.

The film, which was shot in Humboldt, Saskatchewan, is the brainchild of executive producer Dave Fergusson. Fergusson thinks that style of rock 'em, sock 'em hockey featured in the film is a thing of the past.

"It was the wild west back then. He (Goldthorpe) was the wildest, most unpredictable player in the league back then. He was the fiercest goon ever to play the game of hockey," said Fergusson.

Fergusson has been transfixed by the legend of Ogilthorpe for some time now.

"That's the beauty of Ogilthorpe. The beauty of his life story is the drama — and it's both on the ice and off the ice.

"There are incidents where this guy went to a rink in a different league to watch a hockey game and he's a member of neither team and ends up getting involved with the brawl."

Saskatoon fitness trainer and former hockey player Kelly Riou plays the legend of Ogilthorpe. The resemblances between the actor and man in real life are striking.

"I have a curly Afro myself but I keep it completely short because I don't like the curls and the next thing I know they're taking it right back to where it was and blond to boot."

Spoiler alert!

So, Ridley Scott's long-awaited Prometheus is finally here, and the results are … disappointing. While visually stunning, the story — about a group of scientists heading into space in search of man's origins — is overly complicated and filled with holes. Since we're always looking to be helpful, here's what we'd do differently:

Make it scarier

Scott continually referred to Prometheus as a horror movie in the lead up to its release, yet the finished product is surprisingly short on scares, save for one fantastic surgery scene. A lot of this might have to do with the fact that, for most of the film, it's not really clear what the threat is — aside from some very powerful wind.

Ease off the old-age makeup

Unless there's a scene of a younger Peter Weyland (Guy Pierce) that was cut from the film — and maybe that TED talk viral video was originally supposed to be included — it seems unnecessary to cast Pierce in the role just to cover him up with unconvincing prosthetics.

Work on the dialogue

The film falters the first time when the ship's pilot, Janek (Idris Elba), shows up with some succinct information about what's in those mysterious vases he hasn't seen in person and why the "engineers" he's never met built them. Why not offer a clue how he came to such a conclusion?

Kill characters with respect

Maybe starting off with fewer characters would've made it possible to avoid instances like Janek's two co-pilots (Emun Elliott and Benedict Wong) deciding to go down with the ship — despite their being a viable escape — just because the story needed them to not be around anymore.

Where to go from here

What would really be awesome would be for Dr. Shaw and the severed head of the android David (Michael Fassbender) star as wacky roommates on a laugh track-filled CBS sitcom. The possibilities for hilarity are endless!

In Cosmopolis, director David Cronenberg takes us on an existential road trip through the breakdown of modern society. Twilight heartthrob Robert Pattinson plays Eric Packer, a 28-year-old billionaire money manager. Powerful, controlling and self-destructive, he's driving across Manhattan to get a haircut in the back of a tricked-out stretch limousine while his world crumbles. It's a challenging film that exists on the macro and the micro, a complex character study of one man's battle to be relevant and alive and a look at the world that is rapidly changing around him.

Alex the lion (voiced by Ben Stiller), zebra Marty (Chris Rock), giraffe Melman (David Schwimmer) and hippo Gloria (Jada Pinkett Smith) are still stranded in the African savannah and after a side trip to Monaco they join a circus with hopes of returning to their New York home. The Madagascar series has never been my favourite animated franchise but there is more invention and fun in the first 20 minutes of Madagascar 3 than in all of Battleship and Men in Black 3 combined. The new film is funny — it's worth the price of admission.

Extremists win

Indonesian trials of Gaga

SOUND CHECK
Alan Cross
scene@metronews.ca

One of the benefits of travelling is you get the opportunity to see local issues and events through fresh eyes. Take, for example, Lady Gaga's recent tribulations over playing a show in Jakarta, Indonesia.

I had a ringside seat to the whole affair from neighbouring Singapore.

Her sold-out show at Gelora Bung Karno stadium (capacity: 52,000) scheduled for last weekend was cancelled by government authorities after protests by hardline organizations. This included the Islamic Defenders Front (FPI), an Islamist group that threatened violence if they didn't have their way. They made noises about storming the concert to "do what they must to stop the show."

Why? Here's a quote from a spokesman: "(Lady Gaga) is a vulgar singer who wears only panties and a bra when she sings and she states she is the envoy of the devil's child and that she will spread satanic teaching." Seriously?

"FPI is grateful that she has decided not to come. Indonesians will be protected from sin brought about by this Mother Monster, the destroyer of morals."

The ruling secular authorities of Indonesia have been trying hard to give the country an image of tolerance and fairness. They want to be known as a government that is willing to defend the rights of citizens against extremists, an important fact in a country with a history of terrorist bombings.

They also want to show that democratization hasn't stalled in the fourth most populous nation (240 million) on the planet. And by and large, Indonesians are very tolerant.

However, there are signs that the state apparatus is becoming more integrated with religious organizations and their agendas. Commentators in the region say that the Gaga fiasco only proves this point. The government is now perceived as weak and inconsistent.

Now the fear is the extremists, representatives of a small minority, will become bolder and continue to threaten violence against those who do not see things their way.

If they get the government to blink over a pop concert, what's next? Extremist fringes have already used violence (usually with machetes and batons) against Christians and other religious minorities. Are music fans next?

Not if some local little monsters have anything to do with it. Several dozen of them went to the stadium anyway last Saturday night. They waved signs, danced and went home. At least it was something.

British singer is 'like nothing else around'

Unique sound. The Brits are enamoured with the understated singer's raw, soulful voice, and he's set to hit Bonnaroo music festival

Michael Kiwanuka didn't trust his voice. For the increasingly large crowd of music fans familiar with the pure, soulful sound of the British singer's ageless voice, this is probably hard to believe. Yet it's true. Kiwanuka thought he was a guitar player and nothing more.

"The people who were big when I was in my mid-teens were like Usher, and Justin Timberlake started coming out," Kiwanuka said in his sing-song lilt. "And there's R&B singers who are amazing. And I would sing and it would sound not really like that at all ... so people just found it weird. When I listened to it back on speakers for demos and stuff, it just sounded like nothing else that was around."

We can all be thankful for that. Kiwanuka eventually found confidence in his voice, and as he prepares to play his first Bonnaroo Music & Arts Festival, he arrives with plenty of advance hype, joining top acts like Radiohead, the Red Hot Chili Peppers, Phish, the Beach Boys and more on the bill in Manchester, Tenn.

"I think obviously the first thing that stands out is his voice," The Black Keys guitarist Dan Auerbach said. "It's pretty amazing. It's got a lot of character."

Auerbach was so taken with Kiwanuka's vibe, he reached out and set up a recording session in London on a rare day off. The resulting song, the slow-grooving "Lasan," made the U.S. version of the album, which was recently released digitally and will be available as a physical release in the United States on July 17.

"He sent me just this little demo he had with just his guitar and his voice," Auerbach said. "And we decided we'd just go in the studio and record it. ... It was this weird synchronicity thing. We came up with the arrangement on the spot. It was nice."

Things didn't always come so easily for Kiwanuka, a child of Ugandan parents who grew up in north London. In fact, he admits to struggling some in his first recording sessions with producer Paul Butler (also lead singer of The Bees).

Kiwa-'who'-ka?

Kiwanuka was voted in BBC's Best of Sound 2012 as Britain's top act to watch this year.

- Background. Long before his debut album Home Again went gold in his home country, the 25-year-old was already earning attention on both sides of the Atlantic with a series of EPs that showcased his songwriting ability, his understated guitar playing and that voice, which recalls soul singers like Otis Redding and Bill Withers.

"The longest studio session I had with him was two weeks, and I was like, 'Great, I've got two weeks to come up with something solid if anything else,"' Kiwanuka said during a recent interview at the South By Southwest Music Conference in Austin, Texas. "So we got there and all the songs I had tanked, they just didn't work in the studio. I felt the session kind of falling apart. I had one day off to do what I wanted and I just stayed in my room."

It wasn't until he came up with his breakthrough song "Tell Me a Tale" that things really got rolling. He emerged with not only words and chords for "Tale," but also a Fela-esque retro groove that propelled the song in an exciting way and seemed also to break down the barriers he faced in the studio. Butler could see Kiwanuka's confidence growing daily.

"The thing about 'Tell Me a Tale,' it kept its rawness," Butler said in a phone interview.

"It has the grit and the dirt in it. It just has like a good intention with it that wasn't necessarily what he was playing. I hope he keeps that for future recordings, the rawness. Also he's blessed with this amazing African rhythm. You can't really learn what he's doing. It's a lovely thing that first came out in his guitar playing. You've either got it or you haven't."

Although Kiwanauka's sound is not typical of pop, his music has garnered him surprising mainstream support in Britain.

"He got a lot of radio play on (BBC) Radio 1," Butler said. "It was going in between Jessie J and all the big pop stars, and then 'Home Again' would come on, this really mellow, gritty, earthy sound, and a lot of people really loved it."

Which means after years of looking for his place, Kiwanuka has found it.

"When you're a teenager all you want to do is fit in," Kiwanuka said. "You don't want to be unique, which is bad and wrong. Actually that's what's so cool about life - everyone's different."

Dine then dash: A gourmet way to travel

Around the World in 80 Plates. Show's 'cheftestants' travel the world and face culinary challenges based on each destination's culture

MEREDITH ENGEL
Metro World News New York

Curtis Stone, host of the new TV show Around the World in 80 Plates. GETTY IMAGES

On Around the World in 80 Plates — a cross between The Amazing Race and Top Chef — "cheftestants" travel the world and complete challenges based on the culture of the city they're in. Though the series is sending its competitors everywhere from England to Morocco, you don't have to leave your kitchen to add some of the global flair host Curtis Stone says you can bring to any dish.

"That's the great thing about a show like this — there's all sorts of inspiration to be taken from so many different sorts of people. The home cook will learn a lot by watching this."

Stone breaks down lessons learned from his time abroad.

Italy: Customs are important.

"The culture in Tuscany was just so steeped in tradition, and some of our contestants tried to do stuff that was a little out there — they were just like, 'That's not in season right now!' 'Basil in a ribollita? Why?'"

France: Explore your food

"(In our episode in France) they do a tasting of different cheeses and have to identify which ones are made with sheep's milk. I think that opens your eyes to be like, 'Oh, sheep's milk, cow's milk, goat's milk — what's the difference?' They also do a wine challenge where they have to try and match a bowl of ingredients that have the same bouquets and aromas that the wine has. Watching something like that makes you think, 'OK, I'm gonna look out for some of those flavours next time I'm drinking a wine.'"

Thailand: One base, many dishes.

"In Chiang Mai, Thai food really comes alive, and they do so much in a mortar and pestle. They use things like galangal, which is very similar to ginger, and they also use ginger, lemongrass (something that I don't think we use enough of in the Western world), lime leaves (used more similarly to how we use bay leaves), palm sugar, lime rinds themselves, garlic, cilantro (both the stems and the leaves) — of course lots of fresh chilies — and all that's pounded together to create this delicious paste. It's so adaptable, whether it goes into a green papaya salad or a curry. That's how the Thais cook, which is really inspirational."

Rocky Community

The third season of sharp comedy series Community was rather rocky in front of the camera and behind it, culminating in the departure of creator Dan Harmon at season's end. But one of the year's unrivalled high points came with an episode repeating Friday, in which Troy and Abed's housewarming party turned into a surreal examination of seven parallel realities (it's funnier than it sounds). The episode has been nominated for a Hugo Award — given for achievement in sci-fi or fantasy — alongside three different episodes of Dr. Who. (NBC)

Shooting hoops

Basketball fans who have enjoyed this year's playoffs might like taking a look back at some of the most memorable series in recent history with Friday's "30 for 30" documentary entitled Winning Time. The special focuses on retired NBA sharp-shooter Reggie Miller, who managed to rub an entire city the wrong way during memorable showdowns between his Indiana Pacers and the Knicks — as well as New York's most visible fan, director Spike Lee. (TSN)

Flick frenzy

There's a range of cinematic offerings Saturday. MovieTime is airing back-to-back Sandra Bullock offerings (Miss Congenialty followed by the Oscar-winning 2009 tearjerker The Blind Side) while Diva counters with two films from Adam Sandler: 2008's mega-goofy You Don't Mess With the Zohan and 2004's also-goofy 50 First Dates. Action has the epics Kingdom of Heaven and Clash of the Titans, Bravo airs Four Weddings and a Funeral, History has the grim Martin Scorsese flick Casino and Peachtree TV has the 1995 Best Picture winner Braveheart.

Mad Men fifth season finale

Mad Men's turbulent fifth season comes to a close with Sunday's finale. In this installment of the moody period drama, there are opportunities for everyone while Pete meets a stranger on a train. That will be preceded by a new episode of sophomore drama The Killing, and since it's the penultimate installment of the season, answers must surely be just around the corner. (AMC Canada)

True Blood returns

Catch the season premiere of the sudsy vampire saga True Blood, which finds Sookie and Lafayette cleaning up a mess (HBO Canada). And the stellar first season of the freshman comedy Veep comes to a close with Sunday's finale, in which Selina travels to Ohio to support a gubernatorial candidate.

When the twins come out to play

Breasts. Is is possible that society is taking this sideboob obsession too far?

MICHELLE CASTILLO
Metro World News

"Decline of Western Civilization #248: The HuffPo has a whole section dedicated to 'sideboob.'" So tweeted one writer, in response to the Huffington Post's new page dedicated to, yes, sideboobs: photos of celebs flashing a little skin, usually at movie premieres or in magazine shoots.

On Thursday, founder Arianna Huffington claimed the section was a joke — it was put together by the site's comedy team in response to comedian Jon Stewart, who said he goes to HuffPo for all his sideboob needs.

But the fact that most people thought it was real says something about the state of the news org, if not civilization.

Kristen Stewart shows off some prime side boob during the Cannes Film Festival last month. ANDREAS RENTZ/GETTY IMAGES

Yay or nay

SIDEBOOB: PRO VS. CON

YES

Miley Cyrus — one of the most common sideboob offenders — famously said she can't be tamed. So, why do we expect that her twins will comply with fabric restraints? We personally don't see all the hoopla about flashing a sly sideways glance, a safe-for-work version instead of a naughty, full frontal presentation.

Sleek and aerodynamic, sideboob-baring outfits aren't only fashionable: they're environmentally friendly. Letting the natural air cool your body cuts down on needing the air conditioner. Using less fabric cuts down on the need to harvest and use more materials.

In all seriousness, breasts are a natural part of our anatomy, and it's time that we stop being prudish. If we can accept that a simple black censor bar over a nipple makes things kosher, we shouldn't be horrified at seeing someone's jiggly parts. There's much more eye-opening bits out there to get upset about. The whole section was intended to be a joke: There's no use of making mountains out of molehills.

NO

We don't know what's more disturbing: that sideboobs have entered the international news discussion or that people actually seek out sideboob entertainment. By bringing attention to this ridiculous craze, the sideboob vertical shows our unhealthy obsession with celebrity culture. Journalism now consists of writing full articles about these exposing moments because that's what readers want — whether they wax poetically about the shapely curves or pretend to be disgusted by it while they linger on the pictures.

As for the celebrities themselves, they seem to have a constant need for attention. Crotch-high slits aren't enough, now you have to expose both sides of your breasts and perhaps one of the cheeks to get the paparazzi to snap a shot? Instead of using their fame to promote worthy causes, they stage shots where they knowingly show off their goods for a little more time in the spotlight. If the sideboob section was a joke in response to The Daily Show with Jon Stewart's comments as Arianna Huffington claims, the satire was lost between the cleavage of both sides of the debate. The section was a cheap way to drum up more publicity and traffic for the Huffington Post. Our best bet is to put our opinions aside and just stop talking about it. The less that sideboobs are shoved in our faces, the better off we will all be.

Do you suffer from in-grown hairs? Ask us! We can help!
Reasons for ingrown hairs
1. Skin suffering from lack of moisture
2. Stiff beard hair
3. Embedded oil in the hair follicles
4. Build up of dead skin cells in the pores and on the surface of the skin can cause ingrown hairs - some are more prone to this than others due to genetics
5. Coarse curly hair growing in a curved hair follicle
6. Improper shaving technique with a blade such as too close a shave
7. Hair removal methods such as shaving, waxing, tweezing, electrolysis, often irritate the hair follicle. Dead cells can accumulate at the site of the irritation and form papule which can also contain pus while the skin heals. While this process continues any hair in the area can get trapped under the formation and is prevented from exiting the skin properly. Ingrown hair is the result.

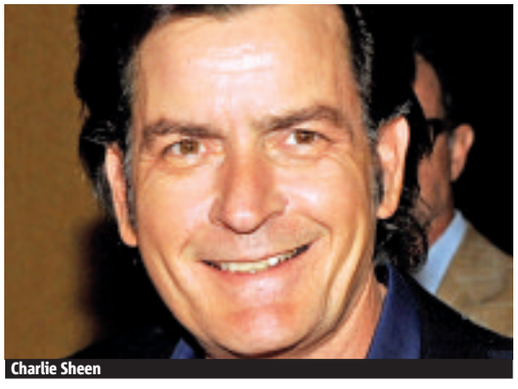
No more auction dates for Charlize

Charlize Theron doesn't regret many things, but she does regret letting herself be auctioned off for charity.

"Do not do it. It's like the worst idea ever," Theron tells Conan O'Brien during an interview. While she went through with the blind date with the highest bidder, she admits she "made two girlfriends sit at the restaurant" nearby.

"The closer I got, I thought: 'This could actually turn out really bad. Rich people can be creeps, too! They can rape,'" she says.

"Look, I would rather just give the money (to charity). It was a scary thing. And (the guy) was weird."



Charlie Sheen

Charlie Sheen is far from 'done'

The way Charlie Sheen sees it, he's come a long way since his famous flameout last year, telling Rolling Stone that he's now sober — for the most part.

"I don't see what's wrong with a few drinks," Sheen says in the interview.

"What's your drink? Tequila? Mine's vodka. Straight, because I've always said that ice is for injuries." Speaking of injuries, Sheen still feels slighted by the way Hollywood pushed him aside after his famous feud with his former Two and a Half Men boss, Chuck Lorre.

"I was blackballed in this friggin' town. I had to generate my own stuff, to say 'I'm not done yet,'" says Sheen, whose new show, Anger Management, is premiering this month.

"I'm not done because they say I'm done."

All about Miley's rock

Miley Cyrus is getting married to Liam Hemsworth, and now she has the massive diamond to prove it.

Jeweller Neil Lane tells People magazine that Hemsworth asked for "something really beautiful and romantic," so Lane produced a one-of-a-kind gem: It's "a 3.5-carat cushion-cut diamond ring, handcrafted in 18-karat gold with intricately carved diamond floral motifs in an art nouveau pattern," he says.

At the centre is an antique diamond that hasn't been re-cut since the 19th century. Cyrus, for her part, seems pleased, posting to Twitter, "I feel like all my dreams are coming true."

Jimmy Kimmel, what have you done?

MONICA WEYMOUTH
scene@metronews.ca

We don't envy Jimmy Kimmel. Whereas the idea of Kardashians is enough to haunt this office, all three were live in his studio on Wednesday night. While he had them there, he took the opportunity to ask Kourtney if she had any plans to marry longtime boyfriend Scott Disick.

"Do you wanna be in my therapy session?" she replied with a seriously scary laugh (did we mention she is 33 and pregnant with his second child?).

"First of all, I have realized that I have major commitment problems during this pregnancy. I'm really claustrophobic, and all my issues — and I have a lot of them — they all stem from this thing. I can't commit to anything. But I love Scott, and he is my partner."

Kimmel made it out of the conversation as close to alive as you can expect after a close encounter of the Kardashian kind. But if Kourtney is sporting a ring next week, we're going to want a word off air.

John Travolta is gay, says former secretary

A former secretary for John Travolta says the actor — who's currently being dogged by multiple sexual assault accusations from men — is gay, according to the National Enquirer.

"Of course I knew he was gay. It never bothered me," says Joan Edwards, who worked for Travolta from 1978 to 1994.

Edwards claims she learned firsthand details from another former employee, Doug Gotterba, who worked as a pilot for Travolta starting in 1981.

"He told me that John was gay and they had a sexual relationship."

Travolta's attorney has yet to comment on the story.

Jim Carrey fires back

Jim Carrey didn't appreciate ex-girlfriend Jenny McCarthy telling Howard Stern that he has refused to maintain a relationship with her son, Evan, who is autistic.

"I will always do what I believe is in the best interest of Evan's well being," says the actor, who denies that McCarthy has ever reached out. "It's unfortunate that Evan's privacy is not being considered. I love Evan very much and will miss him always."

I think we can all agree on what's important here: There is no way we're watching McCarthy's new reality dating show.

The Barbecue Collection

You might not have to cook the same thing twice by following the vision of The Barbecue Collection by the staff at The Canadian Living Test Kitchen.

"Our last barbecue book was a huge seller; we sold more than 33,000 copies," said Tina Anson Mine, executive editor of food and books for Canadian Living in an interview from the magazine's offices in Toronto.

"We decided to update and give this rendition a new lease on life and there are more than 100 new recipes never seen before in all kinds of international flavours."

The other 50 are reprinted from other publications that Anson Mine says have been hugely popular as well.

One of the most impressive and varied is the chapter on grilling poultry.

Rounding out the choices are recipes for fish and seafood such as blackened catfish, a seafood Caesar Salad, grilled shrimp, squid and oysters.

The book also gives its readers The Basics, an in-depth introduction which covers the most up-to-date barbecuing techniques.

Shrimp & Jicama Spring Rolls. These fresh bites make the perfect appetizers

Imagine crossing a monster potato with a water chestnut.

That's jicama for you. And while not much to look at on the outside, the crisp, crunchy texture and clean, sweet flavour inside makes this veggie worth seeking out.

First, the basics. Jicama is a tuber — a big, brown, round root. A relative of the bean family, it is native to Mexico and South America.

Though most often eaten raw, such as chopped into salads, jicama can be steamed, boiled, sautéed or fried.

The flavour is on the neutral side, with a hint of starchy sweetness. It really is quite similar to water chestnuts, and can be substituted for them.

Once limited mostly to Latin American markets, the popularity of Hispanic foods has pushed jicama into mainstream grocers.

1. Dipping sauce: In a blender combine the peanut butter, jam, soy sauce and vinegar. Blend until smooth. Add hot sauce, to taste, then set aside.

2. Place noodles in bowl and cover with hot water. Soak 5 mins., or until softened. Drain in mesh strainer and set aside.

3. Use spoon to scrape out and discard the seeds from the cucumber halves. Cut each piece into thin strips. Cut jicama into thin slices, then cut each slice into thin matchsticks.

4. Fill bowl (at least several inches larger than the rice wrappers) with warm water. Soak 1 wrapper in water until soft and pliable, 20 seconds.

5. Carefully remove rice wrapper from the water and lay flat on the counter. Place small bundle of noodles along one edge of wrapper. Top noodles with a bit each of cucumber, jicama and carrots. Place 3 shrimp over vegetables, then top with a mint leaf.

6. Roll wrapper, starting with filling side, folding ends over the filling as you roll to form tight cylinder. Repeat with remaining wrappers and fillings. Serve spring rolls with dipping sauce.

Skip white wine & reach for...green?

LIQUID ASSETS
Peter Rockwell
@therealwineguy
peterrockwell@eastlink.cca

A philosophical frog once said, "It's not easy being green." White winemakers hum the same tune because consumer love for clean, clear liquid in their glasses has forced them to filter their whites within an inch of their lives for years.

Truth be told, many grapes we consider white have much darker skins than you might imagine, with the best example being pinot grigio. Unfiltered, your average PG would be a few shades shy of rosé.

One white that wears its colour on its label is Vinho Verde made in the Portuguese province of Minho. Translating to "green wine" its name is really a reference to the bright, refreshing flavours characteristic of the region's juice more than the pigment of Kermit's imagination.

Pale straw to the naked eye, Sogrape's Gazela 2011 Vinho Verde ($8.53 - $11.99) is a zesty, light-bodied wine with a zing of effervescence that tingles the tongue and adds lift to the subtle expression of citrus, lime and grapefruit.

A classic summer wine style, Vinho Verde is perfect with anything that swims or crawls in the ocean and makes a relaxing back deck sipper on a warm afternoon.

Almonds boost Shrimp Ratatouille

Ingredients

Grilled Ratatouille
- 1 each red, yellow, orange pepper, cut in half and cleaned
- 1 each zucchini and Asian eggplant, sliced lengthwise
- 1 large red onion, sliced thick
- 1 pint (470 ml) cherry tomatoes
- ¼ bunch each tarragon and chives, finely sliced
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) olive oil
- Salt & pepper, to taste

Pesto
- 2 cloves garlic
- 1 oz (30 g) grated parmigiano cheese
- 1/8 cup (25 ml) toasted blanched almonds
- 1 bunch basil
- 4 oz (120 g) olive oil
- Salt & pepper, to taste

Shrimp
- 3 cloves garlic, chopped
- 1 cup (250 ml) slivered almonds, toasted
- 1 tsp (5 ml) chili flakes
- ¼ cup (50 ml) almond oil
- 2 lbs (908 grams) wild white shrimp (peeled, deveined)
- 2 oz (60 g) white wine
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) butter
- Salt & pepper, to taste

1. Drizzle peppers, zucchini, eggplant and onion with 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil, season with salt and pepper and grill until just cooked. When cool, cut vegetables into pieces and set aside in large bowl.

2. In pan over medium-high heat toss cherry tomatoes with 1 tbsp (15 ml) of olive oil and cook until they burst. Add to bowl of grilled vegetables and toss with tarragon, chives and drizzle with 2 tbsp (30 ml) olive oil. Season to taste.

3. In a food processor, pulse garlic, parmigiano cheese and almonds 10 seconds. Add basil leaves and olive oil. Pulse until basil is processed fine and pesto is formed. Season to taste with salt and pepper.

4. In skillet over medium high heat, sauté garlic, almonds and chili flakes in almond oil, 30 seconds. Add shrimp, season with salt and pepper. Sauté, continuously tossing and flipping shrimp until done, about 4 mins. Deglaze with white wine, scraping browned bits from pan. Add butter and stir, forming sauce. Remove from heat.

5. Spoon summer ratatouille onto a plate, top with shrimp and dot shrimp with a dollop of pesto.

Ex-USC star Jarrett retires from Riders

Dwayne Jarrett's CFL career has ended before it began.

The Saskatchewan Roughriders announced Thursday that Jarrett has retired. The former USC star, the Pac-12's all-time leader in TD catches, signed with the CFL club last month.

The six-foot-four, 219-pound Jarrett had 41 TD grabs during his college career at USC.

Jarrett was selected in the second round, 45th overall, by the Carolina Panthers and remained with the club through the opening three games of the 2010 campaign. The 25-year-old appeared in 32 career NFL games, starting three, and had 35 receptions for 428 yards and one touchdown. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Brodeur breathes life into Devils' cup hopes

NHL. Grizzled netminder gives New Jersey chance to turn around final against L.A.

There was no way the moment was going to get the best of Martin Brodeur.

He's touched the Stanley Cup, lifted it in the air, had it out front of the house where he was raised in the Montreal borough of Saint Leonard. And he's made an incredible career out of helping the New Jersey Devils win important games.

So with Staples Center trembling in anticipation of a Stanley Cup sweep by the Los Angeles Kings on Wednesday night, it should be no surprise that Brodeur was at his best as the Devils forced a Game 5 back in New Jersey on Saturday.

"It's just being in the moment," he explained afterwards. "It's really hard while you're playing to really think about (past experiences) — even though some of them are successful, some are not. But for me, it's living in the moment, living these experiences with these guys. That's what hockey is all about."

With so much of the focus in this series on the outstanding play of Kings goaltender Jonathan Quick, Brodeur has almost been lost in the shuffle. But he stared down three breakaways in an extremely tight Game 4 and benefited from a couple fortunate breaks — two pucks rang off his post late in the first period — to keep the Stanley Cup from being presented.

Whether it was just delaying the inevitable or the start of a historic comeback by New Jersey, only time will tell.

Brodeur has been candid about his team's struggles in the series and knows that there is no room for error in his performance as a result. The fact he's still able to meet that challenge a month after his 40th birthday is amazing.

Few outsiders believed Brodeur would ever make his way back on to the big stage, especially since the Devils had only won two playoff series since he lifted his third cup in 2003.

"I don't think you're ever surprised at what he does, how he handles everything," Devils general manager Lou Lamoriello said at the start of the final.

"He has a personality that never looks back.... He's changed his game accordingly to the way the style is. He's a student." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kings make road look easy

The Kings, 15-3 in the post-season, are the first team to grab a 3-0 lead in four straight series in one playoff year.

- But only one of those match-ups ended in a sweep as Los Angeles has now dropped three Game 4s at home.
- L.A. is heading back into its true comfort zone for Saturday's Game 5 — the road. It is there that they have already set records with 10 straight victories in this post-season, and 12 playoff wins in a row, dating to last year. With one more win away from L.A., the Kings will also set the mark with 11 road wins in a single playoff. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poland captain Jakub Blaszczykowski is determined not to let his team make the same mistakes at the European Championship that have torpedoed the country's hopes at past tournaments.

Topping that list is losing the opening game.

Poland was beaten in its first match at the 2002 and 2006 World Cups and the 2008 European Championship. It crashed out of each of those competitions in the group stage.

"For sure, the last tournaments were not a success, and that's why we're trying not to repeat the mistakes of the past," Blaszczykowski said Thursday. "But I'm convinced all of us players have done everything that we can to be ready for the first match. The most important thing is not to lose this game so as to head down the path of past tournaments."

The Poland side that will open this year's competition on Friday against Greece at Warsaw's new National Stadium in front of 55,000 fans is a very different team, however, from the ones that failed to impress in the recent past.

Above all, coach Franciszek Smuda has three top-class players to build the team around — the Borussia Dortmund trio of Blaszczykowski, striker Robert Lewandowski and defender Lukasz Piszczek.

All three players are coming off stellar seasons during which they helped power Dortmund to a domestic double.

Lewandowski netted 22 goals in 34 league matches and was named the Bundesliga's player of the year. Blaszczykowski scored six goals and provided eight assists, while Piszczek contributed four goals and seven assists from his right back position.

"We have players who can change the game at any moment to our advantage, and that's the difference between this team and past teams," Blaszczykowski said.

The Poland captain and his teammates have an added incentive this year not to bow out early — they don't want to disappoint the millions of home fans who have been waiting for this moment since Poland won the right five years ago to co-host the tournament with Ukraine.

Ukraine president urges citizens to host with 'friendliness'

Ukraine's president called on his countrymen to give a warm welcome to visitors during the European Championship, in the face of concerns over racism at football matches and criticism over a political opponent's imprisonment.

- Viktor Yanukovych hailed his country's success in preparing for the tournament. He also congratulated his country on building roads, stadiums and airports for Euro 2012 and called on his citizens Thursday in a televised address to exhibit "our Ukrainian hospitality, sincerity and friendliness."

The World Cup may be the best-known soccer tournament on the planet. It may not be the best.

To many fans, the European Championship ranks as the top competition.

This year's continental championship, generally called Euro 2012, kicks off Friday in Warsaw when co-host Poland plays Greece at the National Stadium. Ukraine also will be hosting games.

With only 16 teams instead of 32, many believe the calibre of play at the European Championship exceeds the World Cup, which gets diluted by some of the slots apportioned to areas of the globe without strong soccer traditions.

Both tournaments take place every four years, but in alternate even-numbered years. That puts the European Championship, which started in 1960 but became a full-fledged tournament in 1980 when eight teams competed, in the same summer as the Olympics.

For Euro 2012, defending champion Spain — which also won the 2010 World Cup — is the favourite, especially with Xavi Hernandez and Andres Iniesta controlling play. But the Netherlands and Germany are also contenders with their own game-changing players, notably the Dutch trio of Arjen Robben, Robin van Persie and Wesley Sneijder.

Others, like England with Wayne Rooney and Portugal with Cristiano Ronaldo, will also be in the mix.

Hooliganism is always an issue at major soccer tournaments; this year's competition has already been marred by racism concerns and political turmoil in Ukraine.

The 16 teams in the championship — the two co-hosts and 14 other nations that made it through a two-year qualifying tournament — have been split into four groups of four. The top two in each group reach the quarterfinals.

The final will be played on July 1 in Kyiv. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

By the numbers

Only one non-European country (Uruguay in 2010) has been among the semifinalists at the last two World Cups.

Group A

Czech Republic

Milan Baros has recovered from a thigh injury, and will play in the Czechs' opener against Russia Friday.

Greece

Greece is trying to live up to its Euro win in 2004 and will be in tough from the get-go, facing hosts Poland in Friday's opener.

Poland

Desperate for a strong start after losing its first match at the 2002 and 2006 World Cups and the 2008 Euros.

Russia

Coach Dick Advocaat says his entire squad is fit for its opener against the Czechs, including goalkeeper Igor Akinfeev, who had a left knee injury this week.

Group B

Denmark

Denmark is in big trouble early as the weakest club in the Group of Death.

Germany

The reliability of Germany's defence and the speed of its anchor, Per Mertesacker, whose match experience since February has been limited to two friendlies.

Netherlands

Joris Mathijsen is almost certain to miss the opener against Denmark and might be ruled out altogether, robbing the team of one of its key defenders.

Portugal

The fact they've found the net just once in their last three friendlies doesn't bode well.

Group C

Croatia

Coach Slaven Bilic says striker Nikica Jelavic's will spearhead the team's attack after a successful spell at Everton.

Ireland

Opening match against Croatia could give Irish a chance to start out competition on the right foot.

Italy

Standout Italy midfielder Andrea Pirlo has bruised his right calf, although team officials are treating the injury as very minor.

Spain

Will try to become first county to successfully defend European title but the absence of defender Carles Puyol will make it tough.

Group D

England

Opening clash with France on Monday should be a good litmus test after second-round exit at 2010 World Cup.

France

Pressure is on after 2010 World Cup training-ground strike which shocked and embarrassed a nation.

Sweden

Sweden has two concerns going into its opener against Ukraine on Monday — Johan Elmander's foot and the co-host's crowd support.

Ukraine

Ukraine coach Oleg Blokhin says his team's opening match against Sweden will decide whether his team has any chance of reaching the quarterfinals.

Horoscope

Aries | March 21 - April 20. You like to know what's going on and you like to know what's going to happen next but the Sun-Mars link will take you by surprise in a way.

Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Hopefully you won't take what happens today too seriously. You know how silly it is to struggle against events that cannot be controlled.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. You will have to sacrifice something that is precious to you for the greater good today. Remember: You are not making this decision just for yourself but for other people too.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. If you come on too strong today, you are likely to turn people against you, so tone down your act a bit. Charm is the key.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. There is no point moaning about what you are expected to do — just roll up your sleeves and get on with the job.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. The problems you face are mostly problems you have created for yourself. Therefore, hoping that other people will resolve them for you isn't going to work, is it?

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Stand your ground today even if you find yourself up against someone whose power and position puts your own in the shade.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Partners may be pushy today but you must not give in to their demands. Let them know that you can't be threatened and that no matter what, your answer is still 'no'.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. You will need to be tough today, especially when dealing with people who seem to believe they have some sort of right to your time and energy.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. No matter how strongly the evidence points in one direction today, you must keep looking in other directions too.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. If partners and colleagues want to play games today that's up to them but you care only about reality.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Rise above your current situation. Once you understand that minor negative events are of no real importance you'll feel happier — and achieve more too.
